FIGURE 1. A. Schematic of the experimental setup. B. Representative traces of the recorded signals. C. The recorded signals are filtered and the peak is detected. D. The peak is fitted with a Gaussian function. E. The peak is integrated to obtain the area under the curve. F. The area under the curve is plotted against the concentration of the analyte. G. The area under the curve is plotted against the concentration of the analyte. H. The area under the curve is plotted against the concentration of the analyte. I. The area under the curve is plotted against the concentration of the analyte. J. The area under the curve is plotted against the concentration of the analyte. K. The area under the curve is plotted against the concentration of the analyte. L. The area under the curve is plotted against the concentration of the analyte. M. The area under the curve is plotted against the concentration of the analyte. N. The area under the curve is plotted against the concentration of the analyte. O. The area under the curve is plotted against the concentration of the analyte. P. The area under the curve is plotted against the concentration of the analyte. Q. The area under the curve is plotted against the concentration of the analyte. R. The area under the curve is plotted against the concentration of the analyte. S. The area under the curve is plotted against the concentration of the analyte. T. The area under the curve is plotted against the concentration of the analyte. U. The area under the curve is plotted against the concentration of the analyte. V. The area under the curve is plotted against the concentration of the analyte. W. The area under the curve is plotted against the concentration of the analyte. X. The area under the curve is plotted against the concentration of the analyte. Y. The area under the curve is plotted against the concentration of the analyte. Z. The area under the curve is plotted against the concentration of the analyte.
