Abstract Staphylococcus aureus is a leading cause of nosocomial infection. The purpose of this study was to determine the prevalence of S. aureus in the hospital environment and to identify risk factors for colonization. A total of 1000 samples were collected from the hospital environment and 100 patients. The prevalence of S. aureus was 100% in the hospital environment and 100% in the patients. The risk factors for colonization were identified as the presence of a central venous catheter, a urinary catheter, and a nasogastric tube. The results of this study suggest that the hospital environment is a major source of S. aureus colonization and that the presence of medical devices is a significant risk factor for colonization.
